The Value of Outside Facilitation

In many cases the champion of the PMO or PPM cause in an organization is very capable and might even be an expert in their own right. However, it is often the case that the other members of the leadership team do not give the internal peer their full attention and support – in some cases they might even be dismissive. Enlisting an acknowledged subject matter expert (in a servant-leader capacity) can be of great value in such situations. This can be an effective way for you to both refine your strategies and successfully work them through the business.
